Omaha's Virgin Mary Pistol Grip doesn't play a lot of shows, but when they do it's a must-see. The group, who took their name from an old spaghetti western, take it to a new level in a live setting.

The band describes their music as a mix of "a '70s style rhythm section with early '90s riff-driven guitars. Poignant and heartfelt lyrics touch on ever-present issues, such as suicide and drunk driving, and the complexities of love."

It's been a while since I've seen this band play live, and they've recorded a bunch of new songs since then. Get an idea of what VMGP brings to the stage by watching their lyric video to "Battle Creek." Click on the play button above to see it.
